

Work passes | Employment practices | Workplace safety and health | Statistics and publicationseServices | Calculators | Forms | Newsroom

Abuse and ill-treatment of a foreign domestic worker

Employers will face severe penalties if they are convicted of abusing a foreign domestic worker (FDW).

We take allegations of abuse and ill-treatment of an FDW seriously, especially if they concern physical or sexual abuse.

Note

If you suspect that an FDW is being abused or ill-treated, report the matter to the police.

Complaints of abuse are investigated by the police.

If convicted, employers will face severe penalties under the law. They and their spouses will also be permanently banned from employing another FDW.

Related questions

Does ill-treatment of a foreign employee include mental or emotional abuse?

What should I do if an MDW has not been paid, is overworked or not given enough food?

Report vulnerability  Privacy Terms of use Legislation Sitemap Contact us Supported browsers

© 2023 Government of Singapore
Last Updated: 8 April 2021